

Digital Research on the History of Dictionaries and Language

In this lecture, Dr Sarah Ogilvie will present a variety of innovative tools and methods for digital research on the history of dictionaries and language. Drawing on her work as Director of the Dictionary Lab, founded at Stanford and now based at the University of Oxford, she will show how innovative applications of technology allow lexicographers and lexicologists to discover new information and ask new questions of their historical texts.

Bio

Dr Sarah Ogilvie is Senior Research Fellow in the Faculty of Linguistics, Philology and Phonetics at the University of Oxford and at Harris Manchester College, Oxford. She is Director of Global Partnerships in the Dictionaries Division of Oxford University Press