Annual Report 2010

The Fryske Akademy in 2010

In 2010 the Fryske Akademy built on the items assessed as ‘very good, even excellent in place’ in the 2009 review report. In addition, the Academy had to find a realistic view on the challenges ahead, both threats and opportunities.

A large sum subsidy was decreased structurally compared to the estimated long-range figures in the 2007-2012 Masterplan. The findings for a literary researcher and the endowed chair in Frisian culture were not filled.

The results show that production is high, with increased attention to the international aspect. Generally speaking, the number of refereed articles, the number of chapters in books and the number of highly cited articles compared to 2009, even though the permanent research staff had decreased.

The Provincial States promised to contribute 2.3 million euros for renovation and new constructions, which means that full realisation of the renovation plan discussed in the 2007-2012 Masterplan is feasible.

The discussion of threats and opportunities resulted in a new 2010-2013 Strategic Policy Plan, describing the Academy’s ambitions for the years ahead.

Social Sciences

The Social Sciences Research Group has three pillars: multilingual education, research, and social sustainability.

The Mercator Research Centre, part of the Research Group, focuses on multilingualism in regions not only between minority and majority language are spoken.

The Civil Society Platform to promote co-operation with the tropical Development Dialogue, set up by the European Commission, is one of the Academy’s latest projects. Academy researcher Chris Southgate acts as chairman of the Education project working group.

The Wageningen (Sesooce) project studies the effects of the provincial government’s policy of primary education in the Province of Friesland. In 2010, among other things, the starting situation of the schools was surveyed.

In the field of social sustainability, the WaddenWelzijn (‘Wadden Well-being’) research programme and an exploratory research project into ‘The Many Faces of Sustainability’ were submitted.

P.J. Herringa, who has a doctorate in public administration, published his comparative research of European public administration models for the Flemish and Walloon region. "Knowledge management in the Flemish region" is the title of his research project. His research on the education of a new generation of researchers.

In July, the Fryske Akademy organises A.M.R. van der Heijden, professor as endowed professor in the Frisian Language, and the international congress for the Frisian language. The conference will be held in a new conference facility, as well as the scientific innovation and economic interests concerning the lexicography of the future.
